GLOBAL BROADCAST

The yield on the 10-year US Treasury note held around 4.27% on Tuesday, following a sharp rise in the previous session, as strong U.S. economic data pushed back expectations for the Fed to cut rates. Monday's data showed a surprise expansion in US factory activity, signaling strength for the economy and corporate profits. Investors now turn to Friday's monthly jobs report, although its release could be delayed by a partial government shutdown.

Japan's 10-year government bond yield was little changed around 2.25% on Tuesday after the latest auction showed softer demand, as investors remained cautious ahead of the upcoming snap election. The sale of 10-year bonds produced an average yield of 2.249%, sharply higher than the 2.095% recorded at the previous auction.

The Reserve Bank of Australia unanimously raised the cash rate by 25bps to 3.85% at its first policy meeting of 2026, in line with market expectations. The decision marked the first rate hike since November 2023, underscoring renewed cost pressures that intensified in H2 2025 amid elevated service expenses and a tight labor market, effectively reversing one of last year's three cuts.

The yield on South Korea 30 Year Bond Yield rose to 3.58% on February 3, 2026, marking a 0.06 percentage points increase from the previous session. Over the past month, the yield has edged up by 0.31 points and is 0.85 points higher than a year ago.
